

Introduction to the Campaign

The goal of this campaign will be to raise money for the SPCA of Tompkins County, both for regular operations as well as for the SPCA summer camp for kids in particular. This will be done through a few different outlets, which will be explained in more detail with the individual arguments. One of the central strategies used in this campaign is getting animal lovers to contribute to the campaign and having them help get organizations with more money and resources to be the main source of income for the fundraiser.

One major event that this campaign will center around is the recruitment of businesses as sponsors. There will be an event held wherein volunteers from Ithaca College will be going around to local businesses asking for donations/sponsorships. This event will be advertised through a number of means. My first argument will be an article talking about shelter work as well as the event. The audience for this article is IC students, and it is a multi-sided argument (it addresses issues that college students might have with contributing to the fundraiser, like time and money) that incorporates an ethical argument (the idea that helping out animal shelters is a morally good thing to do), a resemblance argument (drawing a comparison between helping with this recruitment event and service that IC students already do, like Service Saturdays), and a proposal argument (students should get involved with this event). The article utilizes a personal anecdote and a peer-reviewed source as evidence. The event will also be advertised using the given poster, which is a one-sided proposal argument also targeted at IC students and would be posted around campus.

I have also included a script that student volunteers can use when talking to businesses during the recruitment event. The script is, overall (because hypothetically, a student might not have to read the entire script to a given business), a multi-sided proposal argument because it addresses the concerns that business owners might have about donating and tries to be understanding of where they are coming from, but it ultimately encourages the businesses to donate. The script also incorporates a causal argument that includes some of the positive effects that donating to the SPCA would have for the businesses. This argument includes statistics as evidence.

Another aspect of this campaign includes reaching out to veterinarians in the area (the letter given is specific to one particular vet) to ask if the office would be willing to solicit donations from their clients. This letter is a multi-sided argument that addresses the veterinarian's potential concerns, and it ultimately comes to the proposal that we have for how the veterinarian can contribute to our fundraising campaign. This argument also incorporates a definition argument that outlines how supporting the SPCA aligns with the office's mission as published on their website. This argument uses a survey that was conducted about the relationship between veterinarians and shelters as evidence in order to establish that the shelter campaign understands the veterinarians' perspective.

This campaign will also include the sale of a children's book about a family that adopts an animal from an animal shelter. The purpose of this book will be to not only raise money for the shelter through the sale of the book, but to educate people about animal shelters and dispel some of the misconceptions people may have about shelter animals. Because of this addressing of arguments against adopting from shelters, the book will be a multi-sided argument. The book uses a hypothetical example to make an evaluation argument highlighting the different criteria that make an animal shelter an excellent place from which to adopt an animal and to support in other ways. The book will be sold at the book fairs held at the local elementary schools, so this will also incorporate a nice display for the book to catch people's eyes and encourage them to buy the book to support the shelter, which will be a one-sided argument that supports the book with an implicit ethical argument that relates buying the book to "sharing the love" and helping animals in need. These arguments will be directed toward not only children, but their parents, who will likely be buying the book for the kids or reading it with them.

The final aspect of this campaign will be a Facebook page that will be used to advertise events like the sponsor recruitment day, publicize any businesses that donate, share relevant statistics or articles, and to share pictures of the animals at the shelter that are being aided with the campaign. This page will incorporate quite a few different kinds of arguments in the form of the different media that are shared, but they are mostly urging people to contribute to the campaign for various reasons, and the arguments are one-sided. The posts I have provided (which were created using photoshop to avoid issues with publishing in the SPCA's name) are examples of the basic categories of posts that would be included. This argument is meant to bring most of my other arguments together by placing them in a cohesive space that has the ability to reach most of my different audiences.

As for some general notes on the project, I think the hardest part of this project for me was categorizing the arguments, because I feel like many of them were on the line between one-sided and multi-sided, because what the "other side" of the argument was didn't always feel clear to me, and in some of my arguments, it was addressed fairly briefly. Because of this, I feel like a dialogic argument would have been even more difficult, so I am grateful that we agreed that the fundraising campaigns could swap this requirement for another multi-sided argument. As far as the types of arguments, I also felt like I was having trouble hitting the mark on all of them because they were all running together, and I wasn't sure if what I wrote would be interpreted how I intended, so I hope I explained myself sufficiently in this introduction. The posters were especially difficult, not only because of my minimal artistic ability, but because it didn't always feel like I was making a solid argument with so few words. However, though certain aspects were challenging, I thought it was really useful to think through how all of the different kinds of arguments we learned about could be combined together to advance a particular goal.

Ithacan Article:

Animal shelters need your help, and here's what you can do about it

When I was in middle school, I started volunteering at the animal shelter in my town: The Animal Welfare Society of New Milford. Having grown up in a family that always kept multiple pets, I loved animals and wanted to participate in a service opportunity that would allow me to work with animals. Though I was barely even a teenager at the time, I was able to go to the shelter for a few hours every week and socialize the cats, walk the dogs, and of course, clean out their enclosures when necessary.

Both of the dogs my family currently owns are from that shelter. The first, a beagle named Paisley, we adopted while I was still working at the shelter. I first met her just after she had been brought into the shelter, and she was scared and confused — the shelter staff assumed she had gotten away from a nearby beagle breeder, and she was very skittish around people. Because she was small and non-aggressive, I was assigned to spend some time with her in her kennel, just to get her more used to having people around. Slowly but surely, Paisley came around and would let me pet her without scurrying away.

It might not seem like sitting with a dog is doing much service, but a study published by the journal Applied Animal Behaviour Science found that even a fifteen-minute petting session with a volunteer can elicit “positive physiological and behavioral changes” in shelter dogs. Animal shelters and the animals that they house benefit greatly from regular commitment from volunteers who are willing to spend time with the animals. The shelter located in Ithaca, the SPCA of Tompkins County (which happens to be the first shelter in the U.S. to adopt a “no kill” policy), has plenty of opportunities for students to get involved as a volunteer, from being an animal companion to helping maintain the facilities. The SPCA has been aiding animals in need since 1902 and can always use assistance; they are certainly a cause worthy of your time to help. So many of us love animals (don’t think I don’t notice how many of you squeal with joy any time a dog passes by), and it’s only right that we take the time to give back and help out our wonderful furry friends.

The SPCA does ask for a regular commitment from volunteers, and we busy college students don’t always have time to add One More Thing to our schedules, so I’m going to tell you about a way to help out the SPCA without the lengthy time commitment. I am currently organizing a fundraising campaign to benefit the SPCA’s operations as well as their annual summer camp that teaches kids aged 9 to 12 about the humane care of companion animals. The shelter relies almost entirely on donations to function, and though it is not easy for us debt-ridden college students to donate any considerable amount of money, we can help by recruiting businesses to sponsor the cause. As such, we will be holding a recruitment day on Saturday, April 21, during which time student volunteers will approach businesses in small groups to ask them for a sponsorship — and don't worry, we'll give you a script with everything you need to say.

The upcoming recruitment event is an excellent opportunity for students to get involved in community service. By helping to recruit business sponsors for the SPCA, you will be aiding members of the Ithaca community who do important work to help companion animals and their human families. I know that the Ithaca College community is incredibly passionate about service, and the SPCA fundraising recruitment day is like an extra Service Saturday; you'll be spending the day doing good work to help people (and animals) in need, while also practicing valuable communication skills. Volunteering directly at the shelter may take more time, but this is an easy way to help out and get involved without overloading your already busy college schedules. And of course, at the end of the day, you'll get to meet some of the cats and dogs that you've been helping! The shelter has offered to bring a few animals to IC as a reward for all of your hard work. So, if you don't already have plans for the 21st, please consider helping out the SPCA of Tompkins County. The SPCA and I would greatly appreciate your time and help, and it's sure to be a fun, rewarding day!

Business Recruitment Script for Volunteers

Dear volunteers,

Thank you very much for contributing your time to the Friends of the SPCA of Tompkins County fundraising campaign! We appreciate your time and effort immensely. You'll be doing some great work today! Here is the script to follow when talking to your assigned businesses!

Introduction:

Hello,

We are students from Ithaca College here on behalf of the SPCA of Tompkins County, the no-kill animal shelter in Ithaca dedicated to protecting companion animals and educating people about how to care for animals in a responsible, humane way. We would like to ask your business, (insert business name here) if you would like to become a sponsor for the shelter and the summer camp being organized by the shelter this year. We would appreciate it if we could speak to whomever would have the ability to make such a donation, and if that individual is unavailable, we would appreciate it if you could pass along a letter outlining the details of our campaign.

If a representative is not available, leave the letter (which contains the same information as this script) with the employee with whom you spoke and thank them for their time.

If a representative is available, and...

...they would like to know more about the shelter and the summer camp:

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (SPCA) of Tompkins County, located in Ithaca, is America's first no-kill animal shelter, and the society is dedicated to protecting companion animals and educating people about how to care for animals in a responsible, humane way, and they have been doing so for over 115 years.

Each year, the SPCA endeavors to host a summer camp for children ages 9 to 12 in order to teach them about the humane care of companion animals and wildlife, with offsite trips to enhance the child's experience. In past years, attendance has reached approximately 150 kids. We would like to ask for your help to ensure that the SPCA is able to provide the best programming possible for both the children and the animals this year, while also maintaining the regular functioning capacity of the shelter.

...they would like to know what we have to offer in return for donating:

All donors will receive this (display the poster for them) poster indicating their support of the SPCA to display in your shop, as well as a mention on the campaign Facebook page. Further, donors will have their logo printed on t-shirts to be given to our summer campers and the summer camp staff this year. The SPCA would like to provide these publicity opportunities as an expression of our gratitude for your generosity.

...they ask why donating to a charity not immediately relevant to their goals will help them:

We are very aware that businesses face a great many pressures and are often asked to donate to various causes, and we understand that as a small business, it may not be within your capabilities to make a substantial donation to any one cause. We would like to emphasize that any donation you may be able to provide would be greatly appreciated, and that we understand if you determine that you are unable to make such an investment at this point in time.

That being said, a survey conducted for Fortune magazine found that around two-thirds of people ages 18 to 34 — which would encompass the many college students in Ithaca — are more likely not only to want to work for a company that gives to charity, but also to want to buy products from and recommend to friends a business that contributes to charity. By aiding the SPCA, your business will be able to receive positive publicity that will benefit your reputation and potentially increase customer support. If you donate now, you will be able to help not only the animals at the shelter, but also the kids who will be participating in their summer programs, and ultimately your own business as well.

...they would like to donate and want to know how:

You can fill out this (present form for donations) form with a check that we can deliver to the SPCA. If it would be more convenient to donate online, we have a computer available for you to fill out the online donation form on the SPCA's website.

...they are not in a position to offer a donation at this time:

We completely understand and thank you for your time. If you would like, we can leave you with a letter describing our campaign, which contains the SPCA's and fundraising coordinator's contact information in case you would like to use it in the future.

If the business representative would like to decline or consider donating at another time, leave them the form (it will include a link to the SPCA's website and donation form)

Letter to Veterinary Care of Ithaca

To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing to you as a representative of the Friends of SPCA of Tompkins County fundraising campaign. As you may be aware, the animal shelter is in constant need of donations in order to properly care for the animals sheltered at this location, as well as to provide educational and outreach programs to the general public of Tompkins County. The leadership of the current fundraising campaign believes that you could be a beneficial partner in collecting donations for the SPCA. After all, the missions of our two groups are similar: though we operate in different capacities, we both care deeply for the wellbeing of animals and work toward promoting the welfare and humane treatment of companion animals.

Your website states that you “want pets to live long, healthy, and happy lives,” and we believe that the work of the SPCA contributes to this mission, particularly with the SPCA’s focus on education and outreach. This campaign is focused on the youth summer camp hosted by the SPCA of Tompkins County each year, and this event is an important opportunity for children to learn from a young age about how to properly and humanely care for their companion animals. We all want animals to be healthy and cared for in every capacity.

Furthermore, upon reviewing a study conducted by the feline activist group CATalyst Council, we understand that there are some unmet desires that veterinarians have of animal shelters, and vice versa. One of the desires expressed by veterinarians in this survey is that shelters “educate adopters about the importance of veterinary care,” and because the SPCA is focused on education about the proper care of animals, through its summer camp, tours and field trips, and partnerships with local Girl Scout troops, the SPCA will certainly deliver on providing this education to not only adoptees, but other animal owners and lovers as well.

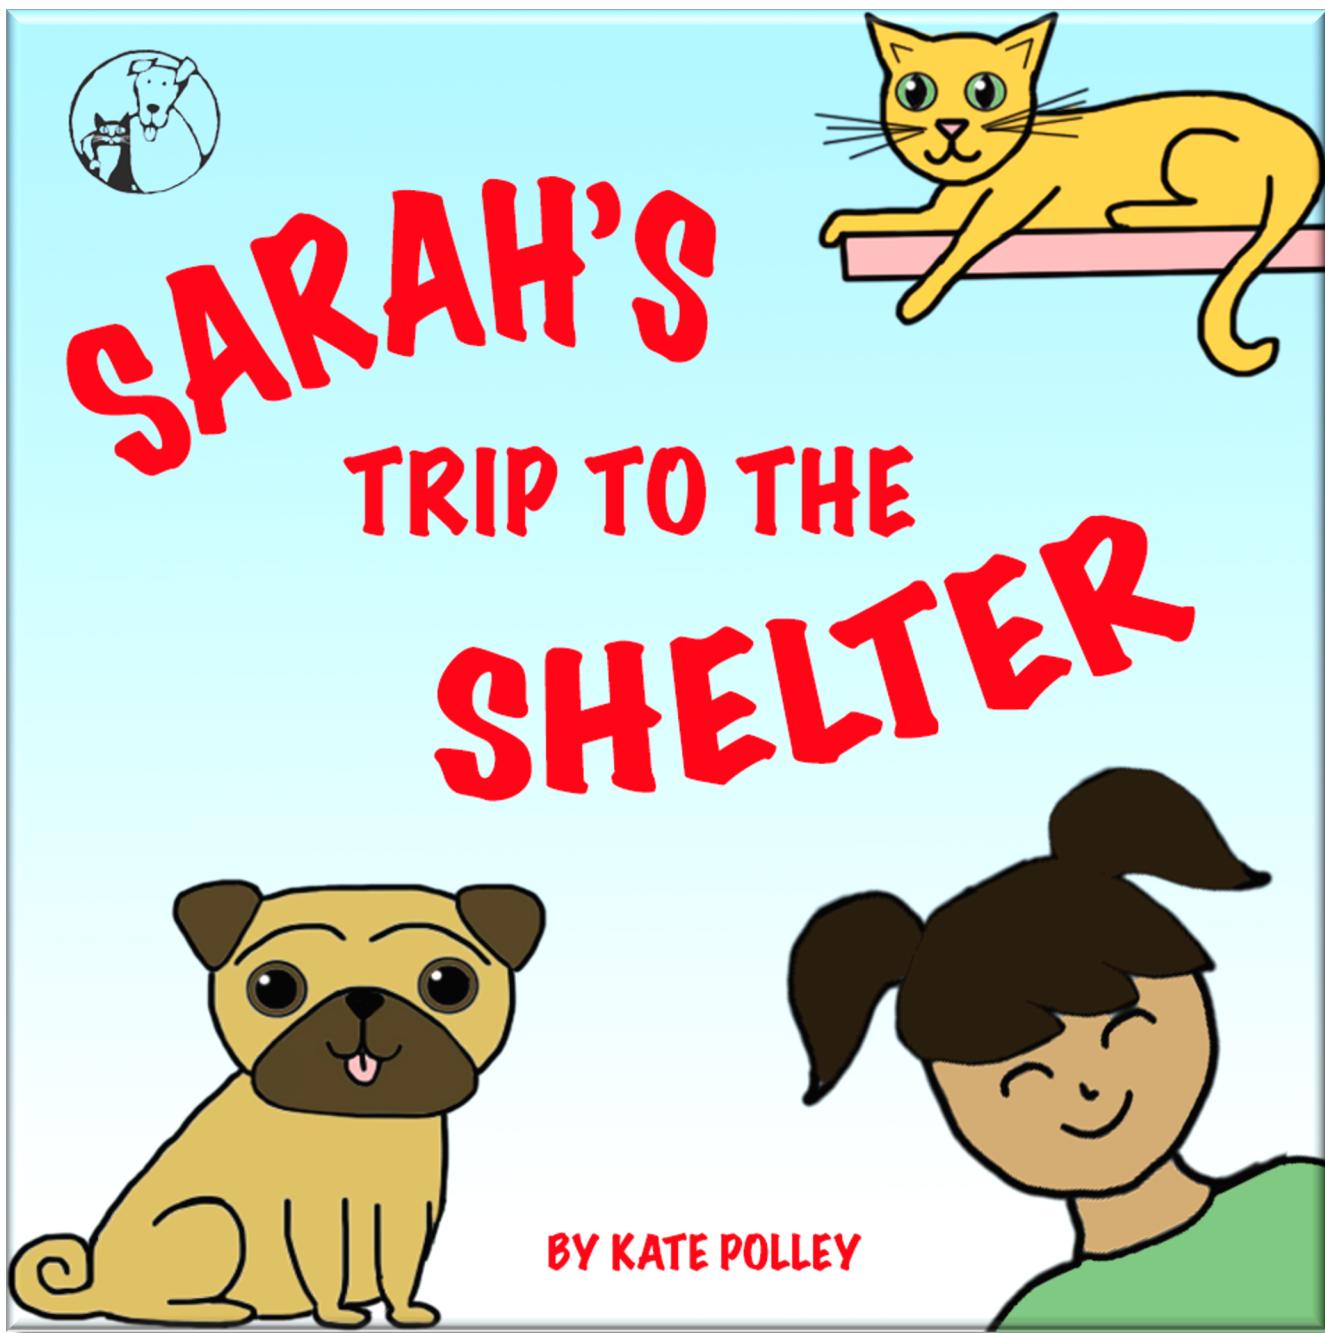

We also know that shelters would like to be able to receive discounted veterinary care for shelter animals, but that such a service is not always economically feasible for the veterinarians. As a result, what this campaign is proposing is nothing so drastic. Should you accept this partnership, we would ask simply that you ask your clients, upon their paying for your veterinary services, if they would like to donate a small amount to the SPCA of Tompkins County. We would also ask that a small flyer be made visible for the clients to see. In addition, we would provide tags where donors can write their name (or perhaps their pet’s name, if they so desire) to put on display (be that in a window, on a bulletin board, etc.) in order to allow them the satisfaction of feeling like they’ve made a contribution to a good cause.

We believe that this partnership has the potential to be beneficial to both parties, and the SPCA would greatly appreciate even this small contribution to our cause. Please let us know if you would be able to take part in this initiative, and we will provide all of the materials necessary to facilitate this collection of donations.

Thank you very much for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,
Kate Polley,
Friends of the SPCA of Tompkins County Fundraising Campaign

Children's Book:

Meet Sarah! Sarah lives with her parents in Ithaca, New York. Last week was Sarah's 10th birthday. Sarah has always wanted a pet to call her own, and her parents decided that she's old enough now to help care for an animal.

[Sarah and her mother are seen walking into the SPCA. They are greeted by a staff member.]

While looking for a place to buy a pet, Sarah's mom, Ms. Wren, heard about the animal shelter in Ithaca. The duo decides to give the shelter a chance. When they arrive, they are greeted by a young man named Tom, who works for the shelter.

[Ms. Wren shakes Tom's hand and starts talking. Sarah gets excited as she sees the animals visible from the lobby.]

As Sarah's mom speaks to Tom, Sarah begins to notice all of the adorable animals at the shelter.

"We have a cat at home," Sarah's mom explains, "so we need to be sure that whatever animal we adopt can get along with our cat as well as with children."

[A closer view of Tom while he speaks, with more detail of the shelter and animals in the background.]

"We spend a lot of time with each of the animals here at the shelter," Tom says. "We make sure that each and every one of them gets lots of love and attention, and that we place them in just the right homes. We do have some animals that would prefer to be the only pet in a home, and some don't do well with excitable children, but we have plenty of dogs and cats that are very sweet and social."

[Sarah has run over to where a volunteer is sitting with a litter of kittens. Tom and Ms. Wren are still visible.]

"Look at the little gray kittens, Mama!" Sarah squeals. "Aren't they adorable?"

"I'm surprised that you have such young kittens," Ms. Wren remarks.

Tom replies, "Even though most people seem to think of shelters as only having older animals, we do have two litters of kittens right now. And this is Kendra, one of our volunteers. Her job is to socialize the cats and kittens."

[An excited Sarah has gone back over to her mom and Tom.]

"I want to volunteer, Mama!" Sarah blurts out. Tom chuckles.

"You're a little too young to volunteer just yet," Tom says. "You have to be 12 years old to work with cats. But you might be interested in our summer camp for kids age 9 to 12. You'll get to spend time with the animals and learn a lot too."

[The trio has moved into another room to look at more cats. Tom picks up one to introduce.]

"This is Boots," says Tom. "He's a really cuddly tabby cat. He's been here for about two months."

"Mama, if we adopted Boots, maybe we could have kittens at home!" Sarah says.

Tom jumps in after a concerned glance from Ms. Wren. "Actually, Sarah, cats and dogs are usually much healthier if they don't have puppies or kittens! There are plenty of them around, and we want to make sure our animals are the healthiest they can be, so we have our vets help them so they don't have babies."

[In the same scenery, another conversation takes place. The three characters are in slightly different positions.]

"That's good to hear," Ms. Wren says. "I've heard people say that shelter animals aren't always the healthiest."

"Not at all! We work hard to make sure our animals are sent home with a clean bill of health and with all the proper vaccinations," Tom explains. "Our adopting families just have to make sure they go to the vet each year for a check-up, just like you probably go to your doctor."

[Tom bends over a bit to talk directly to Sarah.]

"Sarah, would you like to see some of our dogs now?"

"Yes!" Sarah exclaims, jumping up and down. She has always wanted a dog.

Page 10

[The group is walking towards the canine enclosures.]

"Do you have any small, mellow dogs?" Ms. Wren asks. "Shelter dogs seem to be large and rowdy, and I don't think we could handle that."

"No problem!" Tom replies. "We have plenty of great dogs, and we offer classes for any necessary training!"

[They arrive at the dogs.]

Tom continues, "Many of our adult volunteers socialize and walk our dogs. They make sure that the dogs are used to being on a leash and start training them in basic good behavior. We also offer additional sessions for dog owners. If you had a dog at home instead of a cat, we also offer classes to help dogs interact well with other dogs."

[A volunteer dog walker walks in with a large dog.]

Just then, a volunteer walks into the room with a dog on a leash. "Hi Tom," the volunteer says, "how's it going?"

"Just fine, Alex. How did Sarge do on his walk?"

"Great! He's already learning to heel!"

Sarah laughs and squeals, "Mama, I want Sarge!"

"I'm sorry, Sarah," Tom says, "but we've found that Sarge likes to chase cats. We wouldn't suggest sending him to a home with a cat. But there is someone I'd like to introduce you to."

[The group moves to the enclosure of a small black dog.]

"This is Skipper! Skipper is about two years old and he seems to like cats as well as other dogs. Would you like me to bring him out? I assure you he is safe and gentle."

"Yes, please!" Sarah exclaims. Ms. Wren nods.

Page 14

[Tom brings Skipper out on a leash. Sarah kneels by him.]

Tom shows Sarah how to hold out her hand so Skipper can sniff her. As she does, Skipper gives her a big lick! Sarah smiles and laughs; it's love at first lick! Sarah gives Skipper a big hug.

[Sarah and Ms. Wren go back to the front with Tom and Skipper to make the adoption official. Sarah is petting Skipper.]

"I really didn't think we'd find our next pet here," states Ms. Wren. "I thought we'd be heading to a pet store or a breeder, but Skipper seems like he's chosen us!"

"Shelter animals really are some of the best friends you'll ever meet," says Tom. "We make sure they're healthy and happy, and I'm sure you won't regret giving Skipper his forever home. Thank you for supporting the shelter!"

The Friends of the SPCA of Tompkins County is a fundraising campaign hoping to raise money for the SPCA, a no-kill shelter in Ithaca, NY dedicated to preventing animal cruelty and overpopulation. In addition to providing care for the companion animals they house, the shelter offers education, counseling, and training to enhance the human-animal bond. This campaign hopes to raise enough money to support the SPCA's operations leading up to Camp SPCA, a summer camp program offered for children ages 9 to 12 in Tompkins County to teach them about the humane care of animals.

Looking for a canine companion? A feline friend?
Consider adopting from an animal shelter! By adopting from a shelter you have the chance to save an animal's life by giving them their forever home!

If you aren't in a position to adopt, please consider giving a donation to your local shelter! The SPCA of Tompkins County does great work taking care of the animals and educating animal owners. The animals could really use your help! If you would like to donate, please visit the SPCA's site: spcaonline.com/gifts

We thank you for supporting this wonderful cause!
